The officials treated me very kindly, invited me and my officers to a feast at the court house. I received dred men by the Texas. A decree had been issued from the Regent of the Kingdom. LAHAINA, Nov. 15, 1856.

Mr. Editor :- "Truth," in your last number, imagining me to be "Horspiece," tries to apply his mincing knife, but chiefly succeeds in mineing Truth. It seems that only two boys were arrested for furious riding, instead of three, and that they were not the works of a railroad from the Gulf of Mexico to the sons but the cabin boys of the ship masters who attended their trial. To these grievous errors of statement I plead guilty, having made a mistake in these ment I plead guilty, having made a mistake in these particulars; observing, however, that they were favorite boys with their masters, who were very indig- and ships and steamers not to pay tunnage duties or nant at the injustice attempted towards them, and efficiently protected them from it, by seeing that the necessary evidence for their defence, as well as legal necessary evidence for their defence, as well as legal services were provided. They were not "discharged troops at half price. The company are to regulate for lack of evidence," but because the testimony of the rates of freight and passage. the policemen who arrested them was rebutted by an abundance of better testimony, which showed that the boys were not and had not been riding out of a moderate pace. The insinuation of T. that they were not proved to be innocent by their discharge, is a very unworthy one.

T. entirely slurs over the principal point of my remarks, which were that it was necessary to direct in a better manner the ill-directed activity of our native police. I cannot see that any good end of government is attained by directing the chief force of the law's arm against strangers. I think no one who observes the bearing on this subject will deny that the delinquencies of seamen are far more vigorously prosecuted than those of natives and residents. The reason is plain. They are easier to catch. The lazy police prefer to exert themselves where there is the largest and easiest yield, instead of laboriously ferreting out the more hurtful crimes of the knowing and wily. A native policeman thinks a sailor is his lawful prey, and he deals with him mercilessly. Your readers will recognize the literal truth of this remark. How often my blood has boiled at seeing the cowardly brutality of a gang of natives as they lugged a drunken sailor to the fort, beating and dragging him like a dog. On the other hand when the rest of a quiet family is disturbed by a drunken policeman again and again on different nights, nothing short of severe threats can induce his comrades to arrest and contine him. and then it is edifying to witness their meek appea's to the obstreperous gentleman to come along. This is a kind of discrimination that I should like to see exactly reversed. It is simply a cowardly way of treating strangers to mark them out as the peculiar objects of the law's severity, and a very ungrateful, inospitable way of treating a class to whom this kingdom is so much indebted for its support. Those who have authority over the ignorant kaiko will merit well of their country, if they will give particular attention to restraining this vicious propensity of his to oppress the stranger.

For the P. C. Advertiser.

The old adage "it is best to let well alone" is undoubtedly true, because when any thing apparently answers the purpose for which it is intended, even though it should not reach perfection, the chances are, that by an attempt to make it pass for something superlatively good, we either mar our own work or else draw attention to irregularities and blemishes, which, although rough and glaring, might otherwise have been passed by as beneath notice. All the preaching in the world will never make sensible people believe that a goose is a swan-the bigger he is the more of a goose he is. Buffoonery is not wit any more than hypocrisy is honesty, but both might pass unquestioned for the genuine article were not the sterling value of the coin too vociferously insisted

In some of his late articles, the editor of the Polunesian seems to have allowed his zeal in behalf of some members of "our well meaning little government's to outstrip his discretion, and good sense. the public? Most people of our Island world, unconnected with the Government Journal, who take any interest in the matter, think that it has not, and believe that the honorable gentleman, the Minister at War, is somewhat interested in the sales made by the ostensible proprietor of the Royal Hotel. If that is not the case, why are all spirits delivered from the Custom House for consumption at the hotel, or disposed of by its proprietor, delivered only to the order of that self-devoted victim to the exigencies of

While on the topic of Hotels and high officials, the enquiry might be hazarded: What are the honorable gentleman's relations with another establishment of the same description further up town?

It may be wrong to draw attention to the business affairs of so mighty a functionary as the Minister, but then it certainly does not add to the respectability of the government that some of its members should be dabbling in business with the public houses of the place, and it is well to remind those who choose to convert their dwelling into a powder magazine to be very careful how they scatter firebrands.

Some idea of the foray that is made upon the canine race in New York during the dog-days may be gathered from the fact that during the past two months in which a premium has been set upon the unmuzzled curs which abound in the streets, there have been as many as four thousand two hundred animals seized and taken to the dog pound, and of these four hundred were reclaimed by their owners, and the remainder fell victims to that edict which consigns them to death.

Russia.—There are in the Russian empire 245,177,-248 acres of land in forests of immense value. Russia is one of the best wooded countries in the world. The number of horses in Russia exceeds by 7,000,000 the total number in France, Austria, Prussia, the United Kingdom, and the United States. The number of cattle in the Russian empire exceeds by nearly 6,-000,000 the total number in France, Austria, and Prussia, and their value is great.
